LADY CAVALIERS

Joining the National Junior College Association for the first year, the Lady Cavaliers sported an 11-6 record. In Western Tarheel Conference play, the Lady Cavaliers tied for first place in regular season; defeating Isothermal 69-60 and A.B. Tech. 56-55. DCCC finished 2nd to Isothermal in Western Tarheel Conference tournament play at the end of the season. Making REGULAR SEASON ALL CONFERENCE team were: Jamie Snider, a sophomore, averaging 15.8 points per game and leading the Lady Cavaliers in scoring and assists. Vickie Kennedy, a freshman, averaged 11.2 points and 11 rebounds per game. ALL TOURNAMENT SELECTIONS from DCCC went to Jamie Snider and Lynn Gibson.

Highlights of the season included victories over 4 year schools (Greensboro Averett, Warren-Wilson, Sacred Heart).

Akers felt the team contained balanced scoring this year. As the season progressed the team grew together with enthusiasm and team effort. Congrats on a FINE season.

This year's schedule was a tough one. The Cavalier's played some Region X powers like Mt. Olive, Ferrum and Conference Champion Surry. Other non-Conference teams included Duke's J.V. and Pfeiffer's J.V. This year's conference battle was the best ever! Until the last game of the regular season, three teams were tied for fourth place including Davidson. The Cavaliers will have a number of returners next year and are looking forward to a winning season.

MOVING ON

Vice President of Student Affairs

Dr.
H. Herman
Roach

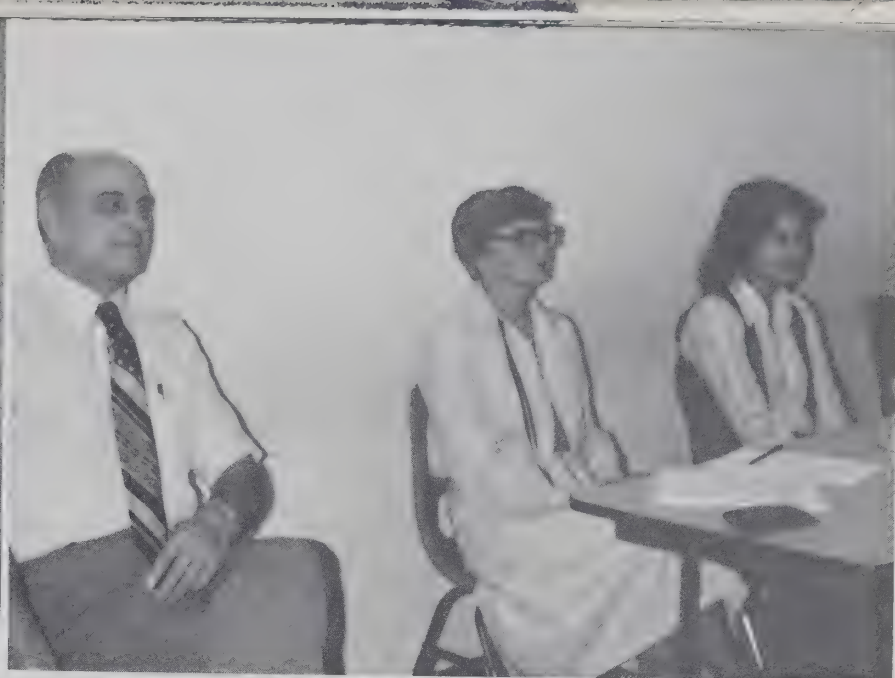

This year's Annual is being dedicated to Dr. H. Herman Roach, Vice-President for Student Affairs at DCCC. "Dean" Roach has been the only Dean of Students DCCC has ever had and is the only Administrator still at the college who was among the original administrators. His years of experience with, and knowledge of the College and the Community College system as a whole give him the distinction of being the one and only Mr. DCCC.

A smile for everyone, always courteous, a true gentleman, Dean Roach has won not only our respect but our love and esteem. He identifies with students and lets them know of his respect for them.

This Annual is hereby dedicated to our "Teddy Bear"!

EDITOR'S NOTE

The 1979-1980 Davidson County Community College Cavalier yearbook is finished. But this year it ends with a touch of sadness. As I finished the last layout and closed the door, I knew it was for the last time.

DC'3 has been much more than just another school. When I think of DC3 I think of smiles and friendship. Through the yearbook I hope to have captured special memories for all.

The 1980 yearbook could not have been possible without the help of several special people. My thanks and love go —

- To: "Dean" Roach and Judy Park;
For believing in me, and letting me lean on them.
- To: Dottie Burkhart and JoAnn Poston:
For their smiles and talent for making others smile.
- To: Judy Sowers and Gloria Williams:
For their help and kindness.
- To: Maxine Conrad, Shirley Craver and Bill Hondros:
For putting up with me and the staff
- To: Ed Hill;
For his photography work.
- To: Patty O'Briant:
For trusting me with the 1978-1979 and 1979-1980 yearbook.

Once again thanks to those special people, faculty and students who gave me strength, a shoulder to lean on, memories, and mainly stood by my side.

The Big Chair: Thomasville's monument to its people

We helped build the first Big Chair in 1922, as a way to tell the world that Thomasville was the "Chair Town of the South."

This central landmark has taken on additional significance over the years, and has become more than just a conversation piece. Today, it stands as a unique monument, a giant tribute to the people of Thomasville.

The Big Chair is a constant reminder of a challenge to all citizens: "to match its bigness with their greatness."

At Thomasville Furniture Industries we try in all that we do to measure up, because we believe that good citizenship starts at home, and Thomasville has been our home — for 75 years.

SOUND SENSE. A BLUEPRINT FOR LISTENING PLEASURE.

No amount of expensive equipment can make-up for poor judgement or hasty decisions when placing your stereo components in the listening-room.

Just as your listening needs color component selections, your preference and habits should guide your decisions on where to put the receiver, turntable, and speakers, before you lay back to enjoy your musical environment. In creating your personalized sound habitat, some safety precautions are mandatory; other considerations, preferential.

Since the receiver is your stereo system's power source, consider placing it first. Your primary concern is providing plenty of ventilation and circulation for the generated heat to escape — particularly behind the receiving unit.

At the same time, we suggest locating your turntable within twenty inches of the receiver to avoid spreading leads all around the listening area. Lengthy turntable leads increase the likelihood of hum and present aesthetic problems if you're fussy about wires as decorating accents.

An added word of caution: Don't put the turntable on the speakers because you're flirting with acoustic feedback problems. Also, to avoid hum, make sure speaker and power wires are well away from turntable leads.

When stringing wire consider placing the final and most critical components: the speaker system. Not only the speaker's quality but also their placement and the listening-room acoustics affect the ultimate reproduced sound. The frequency response of your speakers is affected by their proximity to the walls and floor and by wall and floor coverings. The room variables can be altered by changing (a) listening position, (b) speaker position, and/or (c) listening-room acoustics.

Ideally, you want to make an equilateral triangle with yourself and the two speakers positioned at the three points. In placing the speakers, check-out the acoustic properties of the walls on either side. Otherwise, if side walls are not similar, reproduction of the left and right channels will not be balanced and the stereo image will be hazy. Furniture and draperies may also affect sound.

The height of the speaker system above the floor, in particular the height of the mid-range and treble drivers, should be close to the height of the listener's ear. Tilt the speakers if you can't place them at that height. Stands should be used to raise bookshelf speakers, which tend to over-emphasize lower frequencies when placed directly on the floor.

The wall behind the speakers should be a 'live end' (hardsurface that reflects sound) while the wall opposite the speakers should be a "dead end" (soft surface that absorbs sound).

A quality speaker system will also sound substandard if placed on a thin, resonant floor. The ideal floor absorbs mid-range and treble frequencies and is very rigid. Pound it with your fist. If you don't get a rattly thud, it's probably all right.

The variables affecting the performance of your stereo system are as numerous as the furnishings in the listening-room. Selecting proper component placements without compromising the room's decor can be a tall order. But JVC has solved large portions of both problems with its nifty music tower rack systems that stack components on handsome woodgrain stands.

Come on in and see the stereos that look as good as they sound.

WHY WOOFERS WOOF AND TWEETERS TWEET.

All an amp or receiver puts out is electrical impulses. Not sound. Unless someone comes up with a way to connect them directly to our nerve endings, we'll have to rely on speakers to translate those impulses into moving air — sound waves.

While there are numerous exotic ways to do this, the vast majority of speakers use round cone-like dohickies of varying diameters. They all operate on the principle that a coil of wire energized with electricity will repel a magnet.

The magnet is on the back of the speaker. The coil of wire is hooked to a flexible cone through thin wires. Each impulse put out by the amp repels the coil of wire away from the magnet, moving the cone, causing sound waves.

Simple. Except that different frequencies of sound require different amounts of motion. To reproduce the sound of a bass drum, a large cone of 8" - 12" has to move up to 1/2" in and out. Reproducing the sizzle of a cymbal takes a tiny cone moving just a few thousandths of an inch.

Which is why speaker systems with just one midsize speaker don't sound as good as multi-element systems were the work of reproducing the whole audio spectrum is divided into 2, 3, or even four drivers (speakers) of differing sizes.

The littlest one is the tweeter for producing highs. The largest is the woofer, for the lows — and there's no animalistic name for the mid-size one: it's just called a midrange.

Each is connected to a nerve center inside the speaker box called a crossover. The crossover takes the impulses from amp or receiver, separates and "assigns" them to the respective tweeter, woofer and midrange.

While there just aren't any hi-fi quality speakers around with one speaker (or element), you'll see about an equal number of two-element (woofer and tweeter) and three-element (woof, tweet, mid-range) designs on the market. How do you decide? Listen to them. Compare them. With your own familiar records.

And while you're shopping around, don't forget to listen to an excellent line of speakers we just happen to sell: They're JVC speakers, from two element compact mini-speakers to massive, floor-standing Zero-9's that have two woofers for added bass punch.

They woof and tweet with the best of 'em.

ROCKS AND RUBBER. GETTING A LINE ON TURNTABLE DRIVES.

In the quest for true Thirty-Three And-A-Third-ness, the old Rube Goldberg record changer has gotten the boot in favor of drive systems that cut wow, flutter, vibration and the urge to chuck your changer out the window when a vocalist starts sounding like he picked up a bad tranquilizer habit.

Although wall socket line voltage can vary from as little as 105 volts to 125 volts in the course of an evening, the number of times the voltage changes direction remains steady at 60 per second.

Enter: a "smart" synchronous motor which gets its speed cues from unchanging 60-cycle AC. To slow this fast motor down, attach a small pulley to its shaft and stretch a special synthetic rubber band between it and the large round turntable platter. Viola! Little pulley goes fast; big pulley goes 33

1/3 and is totally isolated from the motor and turntable base.

Still, hi-fi engineers weren't satisfied. What if they could build a motor that only went 33 1/3? Direct drive was born. Now the motor could actually become part of the turntable platter and base. Pure simplicity with no rubber bands, pulleys, idler wheels, etc.

Next, the quest for accuracy led one company to borrow a lead from watchmakers. A quartz crystal oscillates at a fixed rate. Using that standard, sophisticated circuitry can constantly compare the platter's rotation speed to the unchanging quartz oscillation. The result is Quartz-Locked direct drive, 100 times more accurate than conventional direct drive.

Both direct and belt drives have their plus.
